DENTISTRY. DR. T. B. CARR has returned from the North with a largely increased stock of Teeth, Instruments, &c. Having consulted many eminent Dentists, he has perfect confidence in the superiority of Allen's Patent mode of inserting teeth with arificial gums. Full sets inserted immediately after the extraction of the teeth, and remodelled after the gums have healed without additional charge. They can be worn without pain, and removed from the mouth by the wearer, and are cleaner and stronger than teeth inserted in any other way, and are warranted to give perfect satisfaction. All other operations performed in the most approved manner. Reference to individuals in this place now wearing teeth with the patent improvement.

the same time this top dressing affords protection to How to prepare and apply manures is a matter in which every cultivator of the soil must feel deeply interested. It matters not to what expense and trouble we go to procure the finest fruits or vegetaers; or with what excellent taste we may arrange our parterre; unless we furnish the soil with such quantities and kinds of fertilizing materials as will ensure a vigorous, luxuriant, and healthy growth .-purest and best blood of animals that the world can produce, or he may plant the best improved grains case, and skillful, thorough culture in the other, he Third, it should be applied at such seasons as will will be no better off in the end than his neighbor, who has remained satisfied with such stock and such seeds as he could most easily and most cheaply procure. This every one will most cheerfully admit in might be written upon them. Our remarks now are theory, but a great many deny it in their practice; and thus the obstinate opposers of improvement and progress have been furnished with their strongest arguments. Here, they say, are Mr. Brown and Squire Jones, who have spent fortunes in collecting new and fine things from all parts of the worldthey have every known variety of fruit and flowers -they have employed celebrated gardeners to lay out their grounds, and have spent thousands upon labor; and what have they? Why, they have to come over here to us and purchase a supply of fruit for their families; and the old lady across the way, whose garden is a mere patch, and who does all her own work, can show more and finer flowers than they can any day in the year! This is not an imaginary case; we have repeatedly heard these remarks, and had occasion to regret the pernicious influence of such examples. On the other hand, we could point to instances where a single example of a small garden successfully cultivated, has awakened an entire village and neighborhood, and set them at I now used by hundreds of grateful patients, who testify planting and gardening with the greatest enthusi-

At the same time, the ground is cropped with the same articles year after year with very slight variayear. But it is not at all wonderful. We have seen lime, marl, sea-weed, and other fertilizers produce the most abundant crops for a few years, then cease to have any good effect, but rather to be injurious. Dear me, I must go shopping. Shopping is a nuisance; clerks are impertinent; feminity is victimized. Miserable day, too; mud plastered an inch thick on the side walk. Well, if we drop our skirts, gentlemen cry "Ugh;" if we lift them from the mud they level their eye-glass at our ankles. So I opened the door of Mr. Henry Humbug's dry-goods store, which is about half a mile in length, and inquire for the desired article. Young Yardstick directs me to the counter at the extreme end of the store. I commence my travels thitherward through a file of gaping clerks, and arrive there just ten minutes before two, by my repeater, when I am told that they "are quite out of merinos-but won't Lyonese cloth do just as well ?" pulling down a pile of the same. I rush out in a high state of frenzy, and taking refuge in the next-door neighbor's inquire for some stockings. Whereupon the clerk inquires (of the wrong customer) "what price I wish to pay?
